Secrets of Dramb

By MICHAEL COPE
(Special to The Whig-Standard)

LONDON — The secret ingredients of what has become one of the world's most famous after - dinner tipples, Drambuie, are to remain, for the time being anyway, locked in the vaults of two Scottish banks.

The secret formula has been preserved because a Mrs. Georgina MacKinnon, whose husband started the Drambuie Liqueur Company which today is worth an estimated $9,000,000, passed on her controlling interest to her children some years ago, thus defeating Britain's heavy death duties which would have necessitated sale of the business and revelation of the formula.

Mrs. MacKinnon, who died last year aged 87, took control of the business after her husband died in 1945. He had formed the business into a trust leaving a life interest to his wife. She in turn transferred her interest to her son Norman, 56, the company's present managing director, and her daughter, Dr. Margo McDougale, 56, who is also a director.

The secret of the golden - colored whisky-based liqueur has long baffled drink connoisseurs. There have been several attempts to market imitations by competing distilleries, but all of them failed to completely satisfy the discerning palates of liqueur gourmets.

The secret recipe is said to have come to Scotland with Bonnie Prince Charlie, the Young Pretender (and grandson of England's King James the Second) who, in 1745 captured most of Scotland and half of England before he was defeated by an outraged English army.

Although the English defeated him they failed to capture him and, as one eminent historian puts it "for five months he was a hunted

The election was announced yesterday at the provincial meeting of the district wheat producers' committee in Toronto. Ninety-two committee men attended, representing more than 26,000 wheat producers from 36 Ontario counties.

District 9 covers Carleton, Durham, Frontenac, Hastings, Lanark, Leeds, Lennox and Addington, Northumberland, Ontario, Peterborough, Prince Edward, Renfrew and Victoria counties.

THE NAPANEE BEAVER

PETER MacKINNON:

Wheat Board Head Calls Existence Of Both OFA And OFU 'Atrocious'

The chairman of the Ontario Wheat Producers' Marketing Board has called for unification of the province's two senior farm organizations.

Addressing the board's annual meeting in Toronto, Peter MacKinnon, of Bath, described as "atrocious" the existence of both the Ontario Federation of Agriculture and the Ontario Farmers' Union.

"It's a luxury we can't afford," he said. "And I don't mean in dollars and cents — I mean we cannot afford the disunity. It is a mistake for which we will have to pay dearly in the future."

Mr. MacKinnon said he does not "care whether the OFA joins the OFU or vice versa, nor what they call it, as long as we have one strong farm organization."

Earlier in his address, Mr. MacKinnon pointed to the increased strength of labor and business in Canadian society. He said this is the time "when agriculture is in the greatest need of a strong voice."

Mr. MacKinnon also called for merger of some of the province's marketing boards. He said many of the province's approximately 20 marketing boards "have similar operations and the same farm members."

"Some of these boards are large enough and well enough financed that they can offer a complete marketing service," he said.

"Ours is not one of these."

Mr. MacKinnon suggested that all grain, including white beans and soya-beans could be marketed under one board.

(At present there are three boards involved in grain marketing in Ontario: the Wheat Producers, the Bean Producers and the Soya-Bean Growers).

He said all the grain would not have to be marketed the same way if it were all handled by one board. "Each grain could still be sold under the system best suited to (it)," he said.

Advantages of having one marketing board in grain, as outlined by Mr. MacKinnon, included:

Better market information to base decisions.

Sufficient volume to employ a full-time agent.

More economical use of office space and staff.

Sufficient size to hire the most competent people available.
